The Foundation for Liberal and Management Education (FLAME) has established its name as an institute that encourages students to develop in other curricular activities. They believe that education is not only about academics, but much more than that. They had organised a concert called 'An Assembly of Ideas' at their Lavale Campus, which saw excellent participation from students.

Various writers, painters and artists, as well as professionals in creative fields were invited to unite and give the right outlook to the students of FLAME. Painters like Ketaki Pimpalkhare and Aditi Deo were present. Max Babi, a renowned poet, recited Urdu poetry and translations. Suparna Bannerjee, famous ballet dancer, showcased two of her dance creations. The students also showcased their talents.

Parag Shah, chairman, FLAME, who believes that such creative activities help in intellectually stimulating students expressed his joy saying, “The focus behind this is to let students come out with their talents and inhibitions. Students get to know each other better, break the ice and it acts as a group-building activity.”

The development of an individual as a whole rather than just in the field of education sounds interesting and surely helps students to grow on an all-round basis.
